PRINTING TYPES,

PUT UP FOR AMATEUR PRINTERS BY THE

New England Type Foundry Company,

No. 243 Washington Street,

BOSTON, MASS.

NOTICE.

THIS Catalogue will be found to be the most useful and complete for small Job Offices and Amateur Printers, that has ever been issued.

Besides all the modern styles of Fancy Type, we show a well-selected assortment of Plain Job Letter, Borders, Cuts, Rules, etc. The Types are arranged in series, so that the different sizes of the same variety may be seen at a glance; this arrangement will enable purchasers to make a selection with much greater facility than they could from Catalogues where the Types are arranged by sizes without reference to styles.

As fast as new styles are produced, they will be issued by us in extra sheets.

All Types, Cuts, Borders, Rules, etc., are numbered. In ordering, it will be only necessary to WRITE THE NUMBER DISTINCTLY on the order.

A font of type is a certain proportion of all the letters of the alphabet, punctuation points, etc., and in most cases figures; but it may be a one pound or a one thousand pound font, its size depending on the number of A and a it contains.

A twenty-five pound font will readily set a solid form of ordinary matter measuring 6 x 12 inches; and by leading, it may extend to twice that size.

In giving shipping directions, write distinctly, or send a printed address.

Do not mutilate this Catalogue, as it may be required for future reference.

If Type, etc., shown in other specimen-books and not in this, are wanted, the name and number of the article should be stated, and also the specimen-book in which it is shown; or a word or line printed with the article wanted may be enclosed with the order, and unless otherwise ordered, it will be understood that half foundry fonts of such type are required.

TERMS OF PAYMENT.

ALL goods are sold at net Cash Prices, and a remittance covering half the amount must accompany each order.

Remittances should be made in Checks or Drafts on any of the Eastern Cities; or by a Post-Office Money Order or Registered Letter; any of which are perfectly safe.

These terms are imperative, and by observing them, much useless correspondence will be avoided; all orders not in accordance therewith, will be rejected.

UNIFORMITY in spacing, unquestionably, is a most important part of the compositor's occupation: this requires both care and judgment, and, therefore, cannot be too strongly impressed upon the mind of the young beginner. Close spacing is equally unpleasant to the sight as wide spacing, and ought never be permitted, except in very narrow measures; and frequently, even then, with care it might partly be prevented. It is not

An idea, I fear, prevails, that truths are obvious enough in themselves, but that they apply only to men of literary education,—to professional characters, and persons of fortune and leisure; and that it is out of the other classes of society, and those who pass most of their time in manual labor and mechanical industry, to engage in the pursuit of knowledge with any hope of being useful to themselves or others. This I believe to be an error. What is it that we wish to improve? The mind. Is this a thing monopolized by any class of society? God forbid! it is the heritage with which he has endowed all the children of the great family of man. Is it a treasure that belongs to the wealthy? It is talent bestowed alike on rich and poor, high and low. But this is not all: mind is, in all men, and in every man, the same active, living and creative principle; it is the man himself. One of the renowned philosophers of heathen antiquity, beautifully said of the intellectual faculties:—"I call them not mine, but me." It is these which make the man, which are the man. I do not say that opportunities, that wealth, leisure and great advantages for education, are nothing; but I do say, they are much less than is commonly supposed; I do say, as a general rule, that the amount of useful knowledge which men acquire, and the good they do with it, are by no means in the direct proportion to the degree to which they have enjoyed, what are commonly called the great advantages of life. Wisdom does sometimes, but not most commonly, feed her children with a silver spoon. I believe it is perfectly correct to say, that a small proportion only of those who have been most distinguished for the improvement of their minds
